Moving Away from the HR Model: The Emerging New Paradigm in Volunteer Involvement

"At present, the large number of unemployed people who are volunteering masks the need to make these changes. But, quite simply, the volunteer management practices of the past will need to change to take into account the very different values and styles of tomorrow's volunteer."

In this workshop, we will examine seven changes in volunteer practice that will be necessary to succeed in the profession in the future. Participants will learn new skills in attracting and keeping volunteers in the coming decades."
